

That Tickles, Please Stop

There is no going back to look up the history on this one. The former presidential candidate Rick Santorum, in support of the Mormon presidential hopeful Mitt Romney, stated for the record: “government is forcing Catholics to sin,” or something like that. I say something like that because there may possibly be a statement by his office that he was misquoted. But, he did mention that he was in deed Catholic, Santorum that is. I couldn’t laugh any harder, and I mean, I needed to laugh, but sometimes it hurts more and isn’t worth the pain. I laughed anyway.

Do people like this, wanting to be leader of nations, actually think or do they just intend to press the nuclear button and blow everyone up? I won’t research the dates, times, or people. Was it not the Catholic Church that established a person had to pay money for the forgiveness of their sins? Was it not the Catholic Church policy that people should willingly go before the vale and confess their sins? Was it not the Catholic Church that had a the say so in the murder of millions of Africans and those of Jewish faith during World War II? Was it not recently that the Catholic Church supported the displacement and murder of thousands upon thousands of Palestinians in the Middle East. Not to mention the subversive acts supported in South America and other countries around the world involving the overthrow of government?

Has Santorum even bother to ask any of the Catholic politicians in Connecticut their views before making such a statement. Don’t they, here in Connecticut, sin enough on their own? Are they not essentially the government? Who caused John Rowland to sin? Or is that different from committing crimes. Do government officials, claiming to be Catholic need help with sinning? In total, giving the crimes committed, is it possible to discount it as having doing anything with God, the creator, not saying it is not a religion. Just posing the question: What does it stand for, and what does it do, and what is the meaning of the faith? There are many religions putting forth many ideas. But, just because an organization claims it is “religious,” doesn’t mean it is a good thing. Catholics say this all the time about Islam. Islam says this about Catholics. So, which opinion counts?

Was not Santorum involved with the “faith based initiative?” Senator Kennedy from Massachusetts definitely was and he was Catholic. This was a plot to involve government in religion by financing religious programs and projects in turn for keeping what was considered the volatile element of the church silent. Even as I type this, his comments are so weird, I cannot help but laugh. I mean, who says things like this? He needs to hire someone just to pinch him when he is about to say something stupid. These type of people are running the country, and not to mention he supported the Bush policies. How many babies did they kill in Iraq and other places? Forget birth control, babies were sucked and blown out of the mothers womb by United States bombs. I am sure Catholic pilots and soldiers were quite involved.

I have added some of the Santorum article to this document, and an article published on August 15, 2012 along with it. Please someone help me connect the dots to this other issue surrounding the Catholic church and government. It ain’t that funny, the issue that is. Santorum on the other hand cannot be that ignorant. He just can’t be. Politics is the sin itself it seems. I have posted the following yesterday, but I will add it to the document anyway. I don't want anyone to blame government for the Catholic priest running down the street in his underwear. Also, please make sure you read all of the "not so" flattering things Santorum said about Romney in the primaries. Now, he has somehow forgiving him and supports him. Is this a sin? Please log on to NBC news for the remainder of the Santorum article.

Santorum says government forcing Catholics to sin

By Andrew Rafferty

Follow @AndrewNBCNews

AKRON, OH – Former presidential hopeful Rick Santorum said Wednesday that President Barack Obama is "directly assaulting" religious freedom and that his administration has implemented policies that force Catholics to abandon their faith.

"We have a president who, for the first time in American history, is directly assaulting the First Amendment and freedom of religion," Santorum said. "He is going to tell you what to do in the practice of your faith. He is forcing business people right now to do things that are against their conscience, that they will have to – if you're a Catholic – you'll have to go to confession ... to confess that you are complying with a government program that is a sin in the Catholic Church."

The former Pennsylvania senator did not say what government programs he was referring to, but during his presidential run he frequently noted a controversial government mandate requiring religious institutions to include contraception in their health care coverage.

Santorum was in Ohio stumping for former rival Mitt Romney at the rally titled "Who Shares Our Values?" His campaign was largely defined by his Catholic faith and views on social issues, and in Ohio on Wednesday, he said a President Romney would work hard to defend religious liberty, an issue he called "close to my heart." Santorum cited as proof Romney's 2008 award from The Becket Fund, a non-profit institute that aims to protect religious freedoms.

While Santorum was passionate about defending the First Amendment, he was also passionate about Romney's choice of running mate -- Rep. Paul Ryan (R-WI). Ryan's name drew thunderous applause here, where homegrown senator Rob Portman was also considered for the position.

"What Paul Ryan stands for in conservative circles and in the media and in this country, for those who know him, is someone who is willing to challenge the status quo and have bold ideas to confront the problems of this country in a truthful fashion," Santorum said. Santorum, who was Romney's top challenger for the GOP presidential nomination, has stumped in and around Pennsylvania throughout the summer. After a contentious primary, Santorum faced questions about his commitment to helping Romney going into the fall. His endorsement came in a late night email that was interpreted as a sign of his tepid support.

But on Wednesday, Santorum indicated that he fully supports Romney's decision to add the 42-year-old Wisconsinite to the ticket. He called it the most important decision

Romney has made during his campaign.

Praise The What? Father What?

This is what continues to happen in what is known as the church. From the creep Eddie Long to this “thing” being protected by the church, the devil is definitely in the pulpit. Is this not the time for the people of the church to stand up and call for the resignation and flogging of these criminals in robes. Maybe they should medically castrate them. How can people continue to have these demons in what they refer to as an organization expressing ‘love’.

What in anyone’s mental capacity allows them to equate the rape and assault on boys as having anything to do with what is referred to as “God” and “Love?” Is there not anything they can refer to in the Bible that they preach from that addresses this, other than forgiveness? Something is wrong with their ideology. This is where, I think, the Muslim doctrine is better suited to handle this problem plaguing the church. Maybe they should collaborate on problem solving of such issues. I am of neither faith, but they, the church should seek some outside help. The internal “handling of this problem” is not working. It has not worked for centuries.

We should at least give thanks that there are differing opinions in the world regarding certain issues. This type of thing is only one drawback of what is being considered a “New World Order.” I don’t think the ethics and moral compass of the church is suited to deal justly and righteously with such issues, and the failure of society as a whole is brought about by its weakness and failures at dealing with simple issues such as this. Sharia Law may not be the best way of dealing with most problems that confront society, but I think it would help in solving this type of matter. Predators would definitely have more to think about, rather than knowing they are protected by an organization which seems to conspire to sexually violate boys.

Ore. priest in underwear chased boy down the street after alleged sex assault, police say

Angel Armando Perez

(Credit: Marion County Sheriff's Office via KOIN)

(CBS/AP) SALEM, Ore. - Angel Armando Perez, a Catholic priest, was arrested on child sex abuse charges Monday, after a 12-year-old boy reportedly told authorities that he awoke during a sleepover at the priest's house to find the Perez touching his genitals, reports The Oregonian.

The Salem boy reportedly said he ran from the house, with an underwear-clad Perez chasing after him. The boy says a nearby bystander gave him a ride to his sister's house early Monday.

The paper reports that the 46-year-old parish priest at St. Luke Catholic Church made an initial appearance Tuesday in Marion County Circuit Court on accusations of sexual abuse, abuse of a child in the display of sexually explicit conduct, furnishing alcohol to a minor, and DUI.

Police say the boy told them the priest gave him a beer and he drank about half of it. The court document says the boy awoke to flashes and thinks the priest was taking cell phone photos of him.

Detectives reportedly wrote in their affidavit that the priest told them he drank too much at a community event and doesn't remember what happened after he and the boy watched a movie.

Perez did not immediately return a phone request for comment Tuesday evening.

Politicians and Public Officials, Lawyers